Puscii and pinknoise are broke,
come party with us!

Puscii is the radical tech collective that used to run Utrechts first public internet workplace in the Ubica squat (RIP). Since our retreat to virtual realms, we run a server to provide web hosting, e-mail, mailinglists, streaming, etc. to anarchist groups, freaks, artists and other sorts of people like us.

We do our best to keep your data safe from the prying eyes and ears of state and capital, using cryptography wherever possible. Alas, servers ain't cheap, so our little techno safe haven is quite a costly affair, which means we're chronically broke and depend on you to come party with us!

Pinknoise is a DIY media collective, doing ad-hoc live reporting with pirate radio, audio- and video-streams. Together with Puscii we've done live reports on stuff like the Ubica eviction, NoBorder camp, and actions. We need you to get drunk on cocktails, so we can buy (better) gear and stay lo-fi out of punk principle, but not out of necessity.

I HAVE 32 LINUX CONFIGURATIONS RUNNING USING VIRTUALIZATION, AND I HAVE A GENETIC ALGORITHM DOING SELECTION AND MUTATION TO PRODUCE...

THE ULTIMATE LINUX DISTRIBUTION!

THEY ALREADY HAVE THAT. IT'S CALLED UBUNTU.

I DON'T BELIEVE IN CREATIONISM.
